

Iceland welcomes you

While Iceland is currently dealing with a serious financial crisis like the rest of the world business in the country is being conducted as usual. All services in Iceland are functioning normallyâ€”including banking services. Hotels, restaurants, airlines, car rentals, currency exchange facilities, offices and shops are all open for business and welcome travellers.Â

Visitors can be assured that they will be treated with the same friendly and exceptional hospitality that Icelanders are renowned for throughout the travel world. The autumn and winter season is an exciting time to visit Iceland as rates are lower, good deals on offer everywhere and the nature absolutely stunning.

Travellers who experience Iceland firsthand will be surprised by the warmth and good humour of its people and by the comfort of conducting business in a relaxed and easy democratic environment. Itâ€™s business as usual.

Best regards,
